DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Li PN 6275531 in view of Iizuka PN 5767910.

Claim 1, 8, 11, 16, 18: A method comprising:

providing a data set including an ordered matrix of coefficients; (See Li column 5 line 34-35 the presence of a DCT implies an ordered matrix.)

converting the rearranged data set into a coded data set. (See Li figure 1, the outputs of items 40 and 30 are encoded data.)

scanning and rearranging the ordered matrix of coefficients of the data set in memory with a non-raster order scan; and (While Li is silent as to how his DCT coefficients are generated Iizuka isn't, See Iizuka figure 1 items 402 and 409 as well as figure 2 and 3 in addition to column 4 lines 54-58, a zig zag scan is a non raster order scan. At the time the invention was made it was well known to those of ordinary skill in the art the DCT coefficients are non-raster scanned or zig zag scanned because they produce a longer run of zero's thus optimizing compression. See Li column 2 lines 7-12. Therefore it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, to non-raster scan or zig zag scan the DCT coefficients in order to make the invention as claimed, motivated by Li's teaching cited above that it optimizes compression of video data.)

Claim 2, 9, 11, 16, 18: The method of claim 1, wherein converting the rearranged data set into a coded data set further comprises performing bit plane extraction on the rearranged data set in memory. (See Li figures 1 and 6, according to applicants specification, the term bit plane extraction means creating base and enhancement layers.)

Claim 11 is further limited to and quantize the rearranged data set by discarding a subset of the rearranged data set. (See lizuka figure 1 item 407 quantizers discard the high frequency coefficients.) Official notice served

Claim 3, 12, 20. The method of claim 2, further comprising the step of storing the rearranged data set in a memory buffer before performing the bit plane extraction step. (See lizuka figure 1 items 403a and 404a)

Claim 4, 10, 13, 17, 21: The method of claim 1, wherein the data set is visual information. (See lizuka figure 1 and Li figure 1 both inventions are dealing with video data which is visual.)

Claim 5, 13: The method of claim 4, wherein the visual information is encoded with a progressive encoder to create a base layer and at least one enhancement layer. (See Li figure 1 items 30 and 40.)

Claim 6, 10, 14, 17, 19: The method of claim 1, further comprising the step of encoding visual data using transform coding to create the ordered matrix of coefficients. (See lizuka item 402 a DCT is a transform.)

Claim 7. The method of claim 6, further comprising the step of providing a discrete cosine transform to create the ordered matrix of coefficients. (See lizuka item 402.)
